WCI Launches Continuing Education Course

02/08/2008

Cincinnati—February 8, 2008—Wine Cellar Innovations has partnered with AEC Daily to develop an online continuing education course to educate architects, construction specifiers, and interior designers on wine cellar construction. The course will be available through AEC Daily's website (www.aecdaily.com) and eventually through the American Institute of Architects (AIA) website (www.aia.org). The course will be launched in February 2008, and is designed for members of AIA, the Construction Specifiers Institute (CSI), and the Interior Design Continuing Education Council (IDCEC), as well as other groups to acquire continuing education units, or CEUs.

The course is free to take through AEC Daily and takes approximately an hour to complete online. Participants log in, study a presentation, and take a short test. Accreditation for this course is administered by AEC Daily and occurs shortly after the test is completed. Features within the course include the ability to access Wine Cellar Innovations' website, as well as a forum to communicate directly with the course instructor, Brian Stollmaier. Stollmaier, a Senior Rack Design Engineer with Wine Cellar Innovations, also created the course.

"This distance learning course is a great opportunity to reach out to an audience that is interested in being educated on wine cellar construction and design considerations," said Erica Fisk, E-Commerce Director for Wine Cellar Innovations. Fisk added that the company plans on offering Lunch and Learn sessions as another learning alternative later in 2008.
